

Systems

Managing Recurring Activity for improvement of Value-adding process effectiveness and value

Mechanical Work of Working	Range of Work	Regenerative Way of Working
Independent management of each system required increasing energy; increasing external control to ensure communications are receive and dissatisfaction with results	Overall * * * * *	Ongoing interactive systems are linked to externals stakeholder to assess changes in ecosystem and interception of opportunity
Changing standards and resource allotments to reflect conformance demands on business planning targets	Management System * * * * *	Simultaneously increasing alignment between resource allocation and return on investment based on stakeholder effectiveness
Enforced patterned systematic approaches to control and monitor performance	Overall Operational Systems * * * * *	Using the management system as input source for dynamically achieving alignment. With performance indices
Ensure standard methods are applied to operational tasks as a basis for uniformity in results and make adjustments for a standardize process	Operating Systems * * * * *	Dynamic alignment of organizational capability for throughput for energy effectiveness. Systems are managed by teams and resources using the systems
Standardized behavioral facets for ensuring statistical conformance with core competencies.	Personnel Systems * * * * *	Optimizing individual and team potential development and expression in terms of purposeful behavior, thinking quality, and ableness to contribute to stakeholder to the business
Ensure measurement, standards and methods applied to controlling for achieving metrics established and therefore prevent demand and supply variances.	Site Systems * * * * *	Increase consciousness and quality of thought regarding the different parameters that effect movement when seeking to improve site and energy effectiveness on sites
Mechanisms for planning resource expenditures and controlling variance from planned usage	Planning Systems * * * * *	Instruments and infrastructure to provide means that individuals and team can test and challenge the creative capabilities aligned with strategy of the business